

Natural Breastfeeding Limited

This story covers: Adoptive Breastfeeding

Lou and R-J

I never thought I would be blessed with such a beautiful baby let alone do what we thought was impossible, breastfeed. It brought tears to my eyes, and still does as I remember the first time our beautiful adopted baby girl (Ruby-Jae) was placed on my belly and found her own way to the breast to suckle.

I love breastfeeding. The bond I get with Ruby-Jae is priceless. Skin on skin is the most important time to spend with her. I love being able to talk to her and enjoying the closeness we share during breastfeeding.

I know breastfeeding can be a tough road. Trust me I have done the hard yards. With the help, reassurance and guidance of Cheryl I am relaxed and confident when latching my daughter onto the breast, expressing and using a lactation aid to supplement her feeds, even when in public. The supplementer is magic.

Without Cheryl we would not be where we are today.
